

Handcrafted Jewellery
801-1424 Nelson St.
Vancouver, BC V6G 1L9
C: 604-761-0120

March 10, 2009

Sometimes in life we meet and get to know people whom we know are very talented and are great at what they do. Then there are times when we get to experience the very talent and skills which they possess and thankfully put to use every day to make their living, as well as to in some way affect the lives of others.

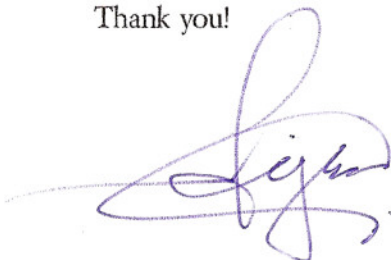

Sometimes these experiences and the scope of what we learn about these talented people, surpass our initial assumptions and open up a whole new understanding of the magnitude of what they have to offer and the true treasure of the skills they possess.

Such an enlightenment happened to me the other week, when upon having a casual get-together, I was suddenly experiencing the coaching talents of Hunter Phoenix. It was just so, catching me off guard that I realized she was pulling things out of me, and clearly had a track she was taking me down to get to what she was waiting to hear from me. A casual, yet personal conversation which obviously; to Hunter; had some deep roots evidently needing to be uprooted!

Hunter, I am honored to have experienced the power of your coaching that night. And to think, such an unexpected and casual moment, yet making such an impact, made me realize how effective your coaching must be when applied on a consistent basis with your clients.

...and soon with me as well...as evidently I could use a little coaching too!

Thank you!

Kajsa Edvinsson/Kyza Designs